COOK ISLANDS

- TAHITI -

Located 1,154 kilometres (717mi) northeast of Rarotonga, is the largest island in French Polynesia, Tahiti. Shaped like the number 8, the northwestern portion is known as Tahiti Nui (big Tahiti), and the smaller southeastern portion is known as Tahiti Iti (small Tahiti).

French Polynesia has 121 islands and atolls, 75 of which are inhabited. The closest outer-island to Tahiti is Moorea, which is 17 kilometres (11 mi) northwest of Tahiti.

Getting to Moorea from Tahiti by ferry takes around 45 minutes on Aremiti 2, which also carries vehicles. Aremiti 6 is a passenger only fast ferry which takes around 25 minutes.

Moorea is a popular tourist destination and is said to have more hotels and resorts than the main island Tahiti.

Tahiti and Moorea both offer many land and sea activities to choose from. Lagoon tours can be enjoyed by boat or jet ski with operators taking guests to swim with the likes of turtles, sharks, stingrays and so forth. Land activities include 4x4 safari, quad bikes, hiking, cultural tours and many others.

Like the Cook Islands, the weather in French Polynesia is tropical—warm and humid year round, with average temperature ranging from 28 and 30 degrees. The dry season runs from March to November, and the wet season from December to February.

Flying to Tahiti from Rarotonga is a 2 hour 45 minute flight on Air Tahiti's ATR aircraft, or a 2 hour 40 minute flight on Air Rarotonga's SAAB.

Within this brochure we provide our local Cook Islands market with 4 and 5 night combination packages on both Tahiti and Moorea. These packages have been developed around the weekly, and codeshare flights that Air Rarotonga have with Air Tahiti. Flights depart Rarotonga on Tuesdays and Saturdays, and return to Rarotonga on Wednesdays and Sundays.

On arrival into Tahiti, our partners from Tahiti Nui Travel meet you with an Ei and itinerary briefing at Faá International Airport before transferring you to your hotel.
